Strange sights, odors and sounds, a change in the daily routine, medications and tests in an unfamiliar environment as well as the disease process itself can all contribute to an increase in confusion, anxiety and agitation in a hospitalized individual with Alzheimer's disease. This presentation will help you to meet the needs of these patients. You will learn about Alzheimer's disease, communication tips, suggestions for working with behaviors and environmental factors to consider in the ER and in the hospital room. A certificate of attendance will be given at the end of the presentation.
